

Something special is taking shape

There's nothing quite like seeing a plan come together, which is why we are delighted with the progress at Hester Canterbury. Not only is construction well on its way and we are on track for a spring completion, we are also thrilled to have sold over 40% of the apartments. We have been grateful that our future residents are continuing to support Hester Canterbury by attending regular events and recommending the development to their friends. The future residents have started to get to know each other and a strong sense of community is already apparent.

We have exciting news regarding a new partnership with Coco Republic, which will ensure Hester Canterbury has the finest interior designs and furnishings. We will also be holding information sessions as we approach completion to share with the community insights into the retirement living options available to you, including the benefits of downsizing.

With over 40% of the apartments sold, you should act now if you want to secure your move in spring 2015 and become a part of something very special.

Construction update

Construction
progressing on-site

Construction at Hester has made excellent progress over the last few months. With all the slabs and foundations set and the roofing completed, the building is now ready to have windows installed. The interiors of our future residents' homes are now beginning to take shape, with plastering on the ground floor apartments now finished and work on the first floor apartments under way.

With joinery well into manufacturing we eagerly await its installation, which will mark the milestone of the final stage of construction. Our construction team are hard at work on the exterior finishes of Hester Canterbury to ensure they meet the same high standard of quality that our interior will have.

Preparing for the future

The future of retirement living communities in Australia is changing for the better, and it is important for the population to understand its options. We will be conducting information sessions on retirement living, aimed at providing an insight into the Australian retirement industry and the options available to you.

Retirement living villages in recent times have departed from the care home model, providing elderly Australians with a wealth of options in the new premium retirement living market. Hester Canterbury is a shining example of a premium development, which is why we are well positioned to share our industry knowledge with the Boroondara community on what they should expect from retirement living and how to plan for the future.

If you and your family would like to express interest in attending one of these information sessions please phone Pam Testa on 03 8809 4199 or make a time to visit her in our beautiful display suite located at 225 Canterbury Road, Canterbury, 3126.

The resident's morning of culture and connections

Future residents of Hester Canterbury

The future residents of Hester Canterbury and their friends came together in late February for a morning of culture, socialising and champagne, at an outing to the Heide Museum of Modern Art. Amongst the attendees was BASS Care CEO David Cotter, who was thrilled to see that a strong community is already forming amongst the future residents. A volunteer guide started the morning off with a detailed presentation on the history of Joy Hester, her family relationships and the gardens of the Heide.

The presentation was followed by morning tea catered by the fabulous Café Vue in the Sidney Myer Education Centre. This was a perfect opportunity for the community to socialise over champagne, cakes and sandwiches.

After morning tea, Hester residents were free to explore the exhibitions and grounds of Heide and take in some of the breathtaking sculptures and manicured gardens.

This outing was a tremendous success and provided a great glimpse into the future of the community at Hester Canterbury.

A partnership not to be missed
